

Some Of The Best Chinese Mobiles Competing With Huawei

With the US Supreme Court's recent ban on Huawei's products and equipment, the Chinese mobile and Tecom giant is currently standing on shaky ground.

However, many other Chinese smartphone manufacturers, such as Oppo, Vivo and Xaiomi, have started to benefit from Huawei's situation, offering phones with high specs and lower prices. Here are some vying for a slice of Huawei's market.

Honor View 20

With a price tag of $540, the Honor View 20 offers a storage space of 256 GB alongside 8GB RAM, but the device is running on Huawei's CPU Kirin 980. The phone is equipped with a 48 Mega Pixel rear camera and is powered by Huawei's AI Processor. On the cons list are it does not support wireless charging technologies and the screen is not OLED powered.

Xiaomi Mi Mix 3

The best Xiaomi offered so far, with a full screen without any notches, and a sliding selfie camera. The phone is considered thicker than other phones. The Mi Mix 3 is priced at $470 and comes equipped with Qualcomm's CPU Snapdragon 855 chip. The phone comes with storage of 128 GB and 6 GB RAM, but for an additional $80 you can get 256 GB Storage with 12 GB RAM.

VIVO V15 Pro

This phone is considered the best companion for selfie addicts as it comes with a sliding selfie camera, with 32 Mega Pixel resolution. It is also equipped with a triple camera with 48 Mega Pixel, 8 Mega Pixel and 5 Mega Pixel resolution. The phone is powered by Qualcomm's Snapdragon 675 chip with 128 GB of storage and 8 GB RAM. All for a $460 price tag.

RealMe 3

The cheapest phone on our list at a price of $200. For that you get 64 GB of storage with 4 GB RAM. The phone is powered by Qualcomm's Snapdragon 710 chip. It has a rear dual camera with 16 Mega Pixel and 5 Mega Pixel, and a selfie camera with 25 Mega Pixel.
